his brother, Henry W. Dixon, from the fraudulent and undue possession and control of Henry A. Root, a New York law ver. The recital of the complainant covers period of eight years, during all of which time, it appears, the weak minded and aged Henry W D xon, who at the outset is said to have been wealthy, was made the victim of Root's hypnotism.

Tangled within it all is a woman, Mrs. F D Haywood, who, it is alleged, made carried out, the people ought to be satis her home with Roct in New York. After a long train of events the re markable story has a still more remarkable culmination in this city, where $20,000 in collatera's, the skeleton of the scattered fortune, and which is made the basis for the action, are in controversy. This amount consists of two Mr. Cockrell offered a resolution declar | certificates of deposit for $10 000 each, which are now in the vaults of the Cen tral Safety Deposit company, where they were placed about one year ago by Henry

W Dixon and Henry A. Root. Since that time it is held that Root attempted to get possession of these securities, but was refused by the company holding them. The latter con tended that the agreement was when they were placed there that Root and Henry W. Dixon could only have access to the vault when each was with the other, and in addition the company had which Mr. Hoar characterized as a grave pointment of James W Dixon, com mirtee in lunacy of Henry W. > Henry W. Dixon was declared insane on January 30, 1892, in Queens county, N Y., but it is said that he had been of weak and unsound mind since 1884, and incapable of managing his affairs. Up to 1884 he made his home with his brother, the complainant. When he left he took up his abode with Henry W. Root, with whom he continued to live until he was declared of unsound mind. At the time of his residence with Room he was possessed, in addition to other collaterals, of a piece of property in New York, at 55 Cedar street, which yielded an annual income of $4,000.

This property he was induced to mortgage for $10,000, it is alleged, at the instigation of Root, who, it is held, ap propriated the amount to his own use. In February, 1888. Dixon conveyed this property to the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company for $70,000, which conveyance, it is held, was made at the instance and under the coercion of Root. It is stated further that Root received the whole $70,000.
